The following self-assessment may assist employees in assessing and managing their professional boundaries.

16.9 Employees may only make physical contact with a student if the physical contact is appropriate and reasonable for the behaviour, teaching, support, management or care of the student. The contact must also be appropriate given the age, maturity, health or other characteristics of the student. Physical contact with a student must be consistent with any behaviour plan in place for the student. Where physical contact with a student is a necessary part of the learning or teaching experience, employees must exercise caution to ensure that the contact is appropriate and acceptable for the duty to be performed.

Examples of situations in which physical contact with a student may be appropriate include:

- assessing a student who is injured or ill where some touching may be required (employees should advise the student of what they intend to do and, where possible, seek the student’s consent);

Acceptable instances of physical intervention are restricted to occasions when the student or other persons are being harmed or at risk of imminent harm (harm to property is not a relevant consideration for employees). The physical intervention and force used must be reasonable in the circumstances.

16.11 Employees must respect physical boundaries with students.

The following are examples of physical boundary violations with students:

- using force to manage or direct a student's behaviour (pushing, pulling, grabbing, poking, shoving, throwing);

- applying painful or noxious conditions to a student (exposing a student to protracted physical management techniques such as standing still for an unreasonable length of time, making a student reach into a rubbish bin without protective gear e.g. gloves).

Emotional Boundaries with Students

16.12 Employees must respect the emotional needs and well-being of students and ensure that they do not violate appropriate emotional boundaries with students.

Refer to the Student Protection Processes.

The following are examples of emotional boundary violations with students:

- shaming, embarrassing or humiliating students (teasing, sarcasm, belittling, derogatory remarks);
- using unprofessional criticism (comments that target the student rather than the behaviour);
- making overly familiar or personal commentary (comments about a student's personal appearance); and
- intimidating behaviours (shouting at or in the presence of students, use of threats and fear).

Behavioural Boundaries with Students

16.13 Employees must respect behavioural boundaries with students. Employees must not develop a relationship with a student that is, or that could be seen to be, a personal rather than professional relationship. Employees must ensure that they treat all students consistently without inappropriate familiarity or spending 'special time' with a student.

16.14 Where a personal relationship exists between an employee and a student (such as a family relationship), the employee must declare that relationship to the Principal/Manager by using the Conflict of Interest Declaration Procedure, at the earliest opportunity.
